

Call for Applications: Associate Professor in Mathematical Sciences Graduate School of Mathematical Sciences, the University of Tokyo, invites applications for a tenured associate professorship in mathematical sciences. We plan to hire one person for this position. The actual hiring will begin on April 1, 2017, or as early as possible after this date. The salary is based on the regular salary scale of our university and thus depends on the academic carrier of the applicant.

Applicants are required to possess a PhD degree or to obtain one by the commencement of the contract. As for teaching, regular faculty members of our graduate school, in principle, teach courses in Japanese.

Applicants should prepare (1) CV, (2) list of publications in which three most important articles are marked, (3) copies of up to 10 major articles, (4) a summary of past research activities, (5) research plans and a brief description of their idea for education, (6) three names of possible referees with their e-mail addresses, and (7) a document certifying the teaching ability in Japanese.

Applications should be sent to the following address by September 30, 2016:
Dean of the Graduate School of Mathematical Sciences the University of Tokyo

Meguro-ku Komaba 3-8-1, Tokyo 153-8914, Japan

IMPORTANT: This English version of the invitation for applications is prepared only for reference purposes. Applicants should consult the Japanese version, which is the sole authentic document:
